The NEXTPHASE FOUNDATION recognizes the importance of maintaining the privacy of users of its Web sites. This Privacy Policy sets forth the privacy practices of The NEXTPHASE FOUNDATION Web site(s). Below we describe why we gather personally identifiable information, when we collect it, how we use it, with whom we disclose it, and how we protect it.

When do we gather personally identifiable information (PII)?

Personally Identifiable Information will only be collected when that information is provided directly by users of the site. The NextPhase Foundation does not ordinarily collect personally identifiable information (PII) from visitors to the site.

Why do we gather personally identifiable information?

You may visit portions of the NEXTPHASE Web sites without providing any information about yourself. We may request and collect information that identifies you (“personally identifiable information”), such as name, postal address, e-mail address and phone number, to allow us to respond to your inquiries, or when you begin the registration process for participating in one of our challenges, or for other normal business purposes. We will use only information that you specifically provide to us.

With whom do we share your personally identifiable information?

WE DO NOT SHARE YOUR PERSONALLY IDENTIFIABLE INFORMATION

What other information do we gather?

Cookies: A “cookie” is a small file stored on your computer by a Web site that stores certain information about your activity on the site. We use cookies to let us know that you are a prior visitor to our Web site and to provide certain features to you. We do not store any personally identifiable information or financial information in cookies. We use session cookies to “remember” you from request to request on our site to provide you with a personalized site experience. These cookies are deleted from your computer when you leave the NEXTPHASE FOUNDATION web site. Most Web browsers automatically accept cookies, but most allow you to instruct your browser to prevent the use of cookies. Disabling cookies may result in difficulties in using the site.

Internet Protocol (IP) Addresses: When you visit our Web site, we may automatically collect and analyze certain information about your computer. This information includes the IP address used to connect your computer to the Internet. We use this IP address to gather broad demographic information, help diagnose problems with our servers, and administer our Web site(s). We do not retain information related to IP addresses and periodically delete usage logs. However, we do assess the number of unique visitors based on the number of unique IP addresses accessing our site(s).

Information about your Web Browser: When you use our Web site, we have access to information about the type and version of browser you are using and your computer's operating system. We use this information to determine whether your computer can view certain functions of our Web sites (e.g., Java-scripted activities). This browser information is also captured on comment or help forms submitted to assist us in providing technical support.
